The natural and usually fair presumption is that there were some grounds for the charge, notwithstanding the subsectual verdict of another jury. He wanted to be able, at any time in the future, if the charge should be made that he had been indicted for felony, to meet it with a copy of the grand jury's own notes of the testimony before them, showing that the indictment was found, not only without probable cause, but in the face of the fact, there appearing, that the thing for which he was indicted was a correct discharge of his duty. He stated that on the day of the trial he applied to the District Attorney for a copy of the evidence given before the grand jury, and he was told that the should have it, that some days afterwards he again spoke to the District Attorney, who said the would look it up when he got time, and furnish him the copy; and that a snother time, seeing the papers of that case in his hands, he again mentioned the subject to the District Attorney, who said that upon consideration he had concluded that he could not properly allow him a copy.

The case of William Berger, a colored man, also indicted for illegal voting, was then put on trial. He is the man who was arrested by Special U. S. Deputy Marshal Ed Duffy on the day of election, discharged after a hearing by U. S. Commissioner Cranmer, and rearrested. He was again discharged, but Duffy re-arrested him, and Judge J. P. Rogers, another U. S. Commissioner, discharged him for the trial time. Then Duffy went before the maladorous grand jury at Parkersburg, which is responsible for all the farcical proceedings against honorable men in this court at this session, and had Berger indicted.

Berger was fortunate in having a clear case. He left the city for a short time, and was o anxious to have no mistake about his legal right to vote that he tried to get some kind of a certificate that he left here but temporarily and desired to retain his citzenship. He was given a good character by promise nent citizens of Wheeling who had known him for years. The only evidence against him was given by Ed Duffy and "Jeff" Davis. In examining Squire H. O. Peterman, to whom Berger had applied for a certificate of citizenship, Mr. W. H. Hearne, Berger's lawyer, incidentally asked him as to Davis's character. Immediately Deputy Marshal Shallcross, who has acted as prosecutor, officer and a little of everything else in these cases, leaned over to District Attorney Watts and with a grin of ghoulish glee on his face, whispered something. Immediately General Watts asked Squire Peterman about an incidentally asked him so to Davis's character. Immediately General Watts asked Squire Peterman about an incident against him some time ago for failing to make an annual report required by law.

Colonel Shallcross enjoyed this hugely, but his face fell as if he had been struck a blow when, a second after adopting his suggestion, General Watts are second after adopting his suggestion, General Watts are and throw up the case, agreeing to a verdict of not guilty. Said the judge: "Write a
